BY C. KENDSHICK, M. D. Wilcoms, great chief whom we alors, As a dear father and a friend; Wilcome, thrice welcome, to this Hall, When thy loved voice with ours may blend, In sweet communion, and where we suce more may look with joy on thee.

SON DAVIS.

The years, the bitter years are past. which so unkindly treated thee; The new life of our Sunny South, war walcomes thee- and thou art free. Nor can the lynx-eyed, evil band, (1) "Ireason," when we grasp thy hand.

If traitors only honor thee, Then we are guilty, and submit To wear the name and bear the shame; . thou once in our darkest night, Within the damp, dark cell hast lain, Fig. as did'st wear the crust chain. This Logislature bids thee come,

I as we may look on thee again; First we may grasp once more that hand-The trembing hand so free from stain. And be a coured we'll bear away. Uniters memories of this day, In years to come when few of as Are left upon life's turbid sen,

The few remaining ones will tell. Of this memorial day and thee; For as the years go by thy name Becomes the synonym of fame. We but thee "welcome," and "farewall," For soon, ah! very soon we part,

And if we meet no more on earth Thou still art cherished in each heart, Firewell, and may we all above. To rether meet, where all is love.
